The papers of John Garland Pollard center on his professional career as statesman, lawyer, author, educator, attorney-general of Virginia (1913-1917), Governor of Virginia (1930-1934), Professor, College of William and Mary (1922-1929), member of Federal Trade Commission and Chairman of the Board of Veterans Appeals but include as well his personal, business, and legal papers and manuscripts of two preceding generations of Pollards. JGP's interests in religious liberty, real estate, art, citizenship and good government, and humor are also reflected in the collection.

Among the prominent correspondents are: Harry F. Byrd, Carter Glass, William Jennings Bryan, A. J. Montague, Harry St. George Tucker, Woodrow Wilson and Huston Thompson. There are also letters of James J. Davis, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Herbert Hoover, Lady Astor, Josephus Daniels and John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

There is considerable material in the collection relating to Virginia politics and national politics, 1900-1937; Baptist Church history; College of William and Mary and Williamsburg; George Washington University; Virginia Museum of Fine Arts (of which JGP was instrumental in founding); temperance and prohibition.

The papers are divided into seven groups: early family papers, JGP personal papers, JGP professional files, Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, church material, JGP speeches and speech material, and JGP writings.

The early family papers contain manuscripts of JGP's grandfather, Col. John Pollard of King and Queen County; his father, John Pollard, Jr., Baptist minister and professor of English, Richmond College and mother, Virginia Bagby Pollard; nineteenth century letters of the Pollard and Bagby families; and a few early letters of JGP.

The personal papers include JGP biographical material and photographs; correspondence with his brothers, sisters, and other relatives; correspondence of Grace Pollard, Violet Pollard, and the Pollard children; JGP business and real estate material including a few papers of some of JGP's early legal cases; letters received by Mrs. John Garland Pollard upon the death of JGP; and memorabilia, including invitations.

The professional files constitute the largest group of the collection and include JGP's correspondence with individuals and subject files. These papers relate to various aspects of his career and are arranged alphabetically. JGP's organization of these files has been largely retained. There are several sub-groups: governorship papers (for clippings of years 1930-1934, see manuscript volumes), political papers (correspondence, clippings, campaign literature--for other clippings, see manuscript volumes), post-gubernatorial papers (papers covering the years, 1934-1937), and material relating to religious liberty (subject file kept by JGP, arranged chronologically). Letters by individuals are found in folders by name and also in appropriate subject folders.
The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts file documents JGP's role in the founding of the Museum and the early years of its history, particularly the controversy concerning the appointment of a director.

The church material concerns JGP's active participation and interest in the Baptist Church. This group of papers delineates particularly his connection with the Grove Avenue Baptist Church and the Williamsburg Baptist Church. See also professional files, Religious Liberty.

The speeches and speech material file is organized according to JGP's arrangement. Most of the speeches are found here and in three manuscript volumes but other speeches are located in appropriate folders in the professional files.

Several major writings of JGP and correspondence relating to them have been kept together as a separate group, e.g., Connotary, Codes of Virginia, and newspaper columns by JGP. Other writings of JGP are found in the professional files and manuscript volumes.

Manuscript volumes and oversize materials are described at the end of the inventory. The manuscript volumes are chiefly newspaper clippings of JGP's career (particularly complete for years 1930-1934) but also includes a John Pollard, Jr. scrapbook, several volumes of vitriicisms collected by JGP, three volumes of JGP speeches and speech material.
